

Short Bio

Ted Loch-Temzelides

Ted Loch-Temzelides, Ph.D., is a Professor of Economics and a James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy Center for Energy Studies Scholar at Rice University. He has taught and given research seminars at numerous universities and conferences around the world. He has worked and consulted for several institutions, including the Federal Reserve, the European Central Bank, the International Monetary Fund, and the Central Bank of Portugal. His current research interests include innovation and the energy transition to a sustainable economy, maritime transportation, self-enforcing conservation agreements, and non-standard models of individual decision-making. His work has received funding from the National Science Foundation and has been published in several journals. He is on the editorial board of the journal Economic Theory, and he is a CESifo fellow. He has served as a Vice-President of the Board of Directors, French-American Chamber of Commerce - Houston Chapter, has written blogs for the Houston Chronicle and for Forbes, and has appeared as a guest on Al-Jazeera and on China Central Television.